

You are on a student exchange. There are students from three different countries. You get a card with description of your country and your personality. Walk around the room and try to meet new people. Ask them about their name, country, hobbies, etc. Try to meet as many people as possible.

VERSION 1

You come from A Land. You love animals, you have a dog which you are proud of. You take your dog with you for walks but in general you are not into any sporting activity. You like travelling, your dream is to visit B Land and C Land.	You come from B Land. You are allergic to animals, when you are close to animals you start to sneeze. You are keen on sport and try to encourage everyone you meet to take up sport. You do it in a very enthusiastic way.	You come from C Land. You hate animals and you don't like animal owners. In fact, you complain about everything. There is nothing that you like in other countries. Your favourite activity is sitting at home and reading books.
---	--	---

VERSION 2

You come from Green Land. You are so shy that you avoid meeting new people and when you talk with someone you don't look people in the eyes. You are a very creative person: you paint, sculpt and sing beautifully but nobody knows about it because you try to keep it secret.	You come from Pink Land. You are a very successful person in your country. You are proud of your achievements and you talk about them all the time. It annoys other people because sometimes you are too expressive when talking about it. You don't travel abroad because you don't speak any foreign language.	You come from Orange Land. You enjoy travelling and meeting new people. You would especially like to go to Pink Land because of its beautiful landscape. You would like to learn everything about other people, being very curious about other people you stand near and even touch them.
--	--	---

Follow-up questions:

How many people did you meet?

Were you surprised by anything?

Was there anything that you didn't like?

How did you feel when someone didn't want talk with you? How did you react?

Did you guess what people from different countries thought about you?