

Too and enough game

VERSION A

Students sit in a group. They draw cards with questions, they have to read the question from their card and answer it with a sentence containing “too” or “enough”. Students use one word from the list (the list is on the table so that every student can see it). The word which has been used should be crossed out. Students keep the card if their sentence is correct and logical. This version of the game can be played in pairs too.

VERSION B

Students work in pairs. Each student has a worksheet with 20 cards. They choose the question they want to ask, the other student answers quickly the question with a sentence containing “too” or “enough”. Students use one word from the list (the list is on the table so that both students can see it). The word which has been used should be crossed out.
